About The Event

After the success of its inaugural edition, the Cell & Gene Therapy World Conference (CGTWC) is set to return in 2026, bringing fresh energy, new perspectives, and a broader global outlook. Taking place in the vibrant city of Miami, Florida, the second edition of CGTWC will build on its strong foundation to advance meaningful conversations around the development, regulation, and real-world impact of cell and gene therapies that are shaping the future of medicine.

CGTWC 2026 will serve as a strategic platform for uniting stakeholders across the entire cell and gene therapy ecosystem—including scientists, clinical researchers, biotech executives, manufacturing experts, regulatory authorities, and investors. The conference will offer a focused environment for meaningful exchange, where scientific breakthroughs connect with clinical and commercial realities. It's designed to support the ongoing effort to bring innovative therapies out of the lab and into real-world use.

With a strong focus on collaboration and real-world impact, this year's edition will offer a comprehensive agenda filled with keynote presentations, expert panels, and in-depth case studies. Delegates will explore current advancements, emerging technologies, and critical challenges facing the industry, from product development and scale-up manufacturing to global regulatory trends and patient access.
