ABOUT THE EVENT

The 2nd Edition of the Preventive Medicine World Conference (PRMWC-2026) will take place in the dynamic and culturally rich city of Bangkok, Thailand, from October 16–18, 2026. This prestigious international event is devoted to advancing the field of preventive medicine, fostering interdisciplinary collaboration, and accelerating innovative solutions that promote global health and well-being.

PRMWC-2026 serves as a leading platform for the exchange of cutting-edge research, public health strategies, and policy initiatives focused on disease prevention, health promotion, and the improvement of healthcare systems worldwide. Through thought-provoking keynote lectures, expert-led sessions, and interactive panel discussions, participants will explore the evolving landscape of preventive medicine and its pivotal role in global health security.

As the world continues to confront complex health challenges from non-communicable diseases to emerging infectious threats, preventive medicine stands at the forefront of sustainable healthcare. Despite its critical importance, substantial gaps remain in implementation and access. PRMWC-2026 aims to spotlight these challenges while highlighting pioneering research and community-driven solutions.

With a passionate organizing committee and a thoughtfully curated agenda, PRMWC-2026 promises an enriching and impactful experience for researchers, clinicians, policymakers, and public health professionals alike. Join us in Bangkok to present your work, collaborate with international leaders, and contribute to redefining the future of preventive medicine.
