ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The rising burden of various communicable and non-communicable disorders has driven the adoption of preventive medicine. The numerous advantages of preventive medicine have gained traction worldwide over curative measures. PRMWC 2025 is expected to be an informative conference, scheduled to take place at Paris, France from 18-20 July, 2025. This event sheds light on several strategies and related topics associated with preventive medicine and emphasizes addressing global health challenges and preventing diseases proactively. In recent decades, preventive medicines have become a global priority, promoting healthy well-being among individuals as well as communities. This conference expects to analyze and scope of preventive medicine and discuss its benefits.

The event will conduct engaging programs such as poster presentations, talks, and workshops, which will allow brilliant minds from all over the world to share insightful thoughts on preventive medicine. This event aims to offer a great platform for researchers, doctors, preventive medicine specialists, industry leaders, policymakers, experts, students, and businesses to participate and share groundbreaking innovative ideas and solutions that can transform the preventive medicine domain.

Attendees will have the exclusive opportunity to explore several scientific sessions of the conference, including Public Health and General Preventive Medicine, Occupational Medicine, Aerospace Medicine, Prevention Strategies, Preventive Care and Services, Lifestyle Medicine, Public Health Policy, Family Medicine, Preventive Cardiology, Preventive Oncology, Preventive Dentistry, Preventive Strategies for Mental Illness, and Future of Preventive Medicine. This conference offers excellent opportunities for all attendees to understand the need for disease prevention and develop knowledge about the recent advancements in preventive medicines. The participants will also have the chance to discover the future of preventive medicine by interacting with key figures from the conference.

The conference welcomes great minds from around the world to participate and make this event a great success. It will be beneficial for attendees as it will foster collaborations and partnerships in the field of preventive medicine.
